

Course / workshop with Esther Perel 6-7 October!

Esther Perel is a licensed marriage and family therapist and the author of the book Mating in Captivity - Reconciling the Erotic & the Domestic.

The course is held in Stockholm from 6 to 7 October 2008 and turns to you who are working with people but also to others who are interested in the subject.

Is it impossible to have a good sex life in long term relationships?

Esther Perel writes about the issue that few talk openly about: the tension with sex disappearing in time for many couples, and it does not matter whether you are young, old, hetero- or homosexual, married or cohabiting. There are no easy answers. Her recently translated into Swedish book, "Mating in captivity..." shows the different solutions.

The book is based on Perel's long experience as a therapist and gives many examples of how couples are rediscovering lust for each other. It's not a book about different sexual techniques – it's a philosophical and psychological reasoning about sex, feelings and daily lives.

Esther Perel is a marriage and family therapist with twenty years experience of working with couple therapy. She is originally from Belgium and since many years ago resident and working in New York where she has recently become elected to The Society for Sex Therapy and Research (SSTAR), the most significant association of sexologists in the United States. Her book attracted much attention both in the United States and in the Swedish media when it was published the autumn of 2007.

During the course Esther Perel is lecturing and deepening around the themes she takes up in her book, and demonstrates and conveys methodological knowledge.
